DAVID MEINZ

The Heart of Dentistry

The Silent Health Risk Facing Dental Professionals

Dental professionals care for others daily yet face a significant and often overlooked risk: cardiovascular disease, the leading cause of death.

Designed for the entire dental team, this program delivers practical strategies to support sustained energy and long-term health. It examines how inflammation, nutrition, and metabolic health influence vitality, performance, and disease risk.

Participants will examine the underlying science, including periodontal disease and systemic inflammation through the lens of both patient care and personal health. Grounded in real-world application, this program challenges common misconceptions around dietary supplements, sugar substitutes, and cardiovascular disease prevention.

When dental professionals apply these principles personally, their ability to influence patient behavior becomes more authentic and effective.

- Understand the relationship between oral inflammation and cardiovascular disease
- Analyze how sugar metabolism and dietary patterns influence systemic health and disease risk
- Evaluate the effectiveness and limitations of common supplement and nutrition strategies
- Appreciate the new, more comprehensive model of cardiovascular disease prevention, beyond traditional cholesterol metrics
- Develop practical, sustainable approaches to support both professional performance and long-term wellbeing
- Integrate personal health awareness into more effective and authentic patient communication

32 Teeth and 10 Bonus Years

How Dental Professionals and Their Patients Can Add 10 Healthy Years to Their Lives

Dental professionals spend their careers helping others maintain health yet often sacrifice their own in the process. High stress, long hours, and inconsistent lifestyle habits can quietly erode energy, performance, and long-term wellbeing.

In this powerful, practical program, David Mainz presents a research-backed roadmap for adding not just years to life, but life to years. Drawing from decades of work in nutrition science and human performance, this course focuses on the most impactful lifestyle factors influencing longevity, including nutrition, weight management, inflammation, and oral and metabolic health.

Participants will examine the real drivers behind chronic illnesses, including cardiovascular disease, cancer, diabetes, and more. Learn how simple, sustainable changes can significantly reduce risk. From understanding the role of blood sugar and insulin to addressing the hidden effects of daily habits, this program cuts through the noise and delivers clear, actionable strategies.
